tation against the Austrian press on account of the spathy it was manifesting for the Poles.

Strum. Feb. 7, 1863.
Is stated that the Poles have intercepted letters to Bussion Ambassadors at Berlin and Paris accusing tria of encouraging the Poles in their insurrection.
Is also stated that the Poles have intercepted letters a the Grand Puke Constantine stating his intention to be the same course of action he has hitherto pursued as government of Poland.

BESLY. Feb. 14, 1863.

both Russians and Poles; if, instead of turning round and facing the butcher of nations, you cowardly overwhelm by the superiority of your arms and your numbers those heroic and despairing populations, claiming the first of all rights, the right to their country; if, in this nineteenth century, you consummate the nessasination of Poland; if you do those things, know yo, men of the Russian arm; that you will fall, which appears impossible, even lower than the gauge of the Southern States of America, and raise against you the asceration of the whole civilized world. Crimes committed by might remain crimes; public horror is a penalty.

Russian soldiers, let the Poles inspire you; fight not against them. What you have before you in Poland is not the enemy; it is example.
